

ABSTRACT

Methods and apparatus, including computer program products, for developing an application. The development includes the use of a data model (e.g., a metamodel represented using UML) from which an API is derived. The API can include features
5 derived from customizable extensions within the data model.

20734385.doc